

Our History and the Christian Connection

John
Cadbury

During the Industrial Revolution, John Cadbury vigorously campaigned against the employment of small boys as chimney sweeps. Meanwhile the owners of the coal mines were recruiting nine-year-old children (and sometimes younger) to work in their mines. The children worked a 12-hour day, 6 days a week. What was the reason for these two completely different approaches to the children?
