

Our History and the Christian Connection

Australia's 'Freedom of the Press' was achieved in 1824. Before then, the Sydney Gazette and New South Wales Advertiser, the first newspaper printed in Australia, was considered a government publication and was censored by Governor King.

Australia's First Newspaper

When Robert Howe took over the printing from his convict father George, this new freedom from Government censorship enabled him to promote the moral and compassionate teachings of Jesus to the new colony.
